

Signs of Spring at the New York Botanical Garden

By Don Sutherland

On Sunday, the temperature rose to 40° in New York City. At the New York Botanical Garden only a few patches of snow remain in shady spots, along with some snow piles. Even as it is early March, the Garden is showing its first indications of spring. Three photos:

